

Five Ways to Get the Most from Your Music Lessons

1. Insist on a professional teaching environment.

Choose a studio where your student will not be distracted by phones, pets, foot traffic, etc. A studio with receptionist services also ensures that valuable lesson time is not spent on administrative items like scheduling and tuition.

2. Save time by scheduling your children together.

Your time is valuable. Choosing a studio with multiple teachers and lesson programs means you can schedule two or more of your children in lessons at the same time! A studio with a receptionist and retail services also means you can take care of any questions and scheduling needs while your student is in lessons, as well as pick up needed music and supplies for their lessons in one convenient location. Both of our locations offer receptionist hours during all teaching hours, as well as the music and supplies needed for lessons.

3. Look for a variety of programs to fit your needs.

To get the most from your lessons, choose a studio where your goals can be attained. You may want lessons in a group setting or prefer private lessons. You should also choose a teacher that best fits your learning style and personality, and a studio with programs for all age levels. We offer lessons for a number of instruments from a variety of teachers. Private lessons are available for all instruments, partner lessons available for most, and group lessons available for piano and guitar.

4. Choose programs that are motivational and fun.

Children and adults alike will benefit from motivating and fun programs that encourage progress and achievement. Practice incentives, end-of-level medals, Musician of the Week, and Student of the Month awards are just some of the ways we encourage students to do their best and foster a lifetime love of music.

5. Let students play the songs they love.

It's no mystery: students practice more when they enjoy what they are playing. While having a structured method is important for learning the theory and technique that are essential to success, we give students the option of supplementing their learning material with the style of music they want to play (pop, movie tunes, religious, classical, jazz, etc.).